Monica Genta

"People often say education is broken, however, I don't think that's true. Education is evolving into something beautiful, even though the growing pains can be difficult. The past few years have absolutely proven that learning happens best with relationships at the forefront of everything. If we want to see the fruits of education, first we must build deeply rooted relationships with our students!

Come hang out with me as we look at fun, innovative ways to do life with kids on a social emotional level. You will laugh, you will cry, and you will walk away with a new passion for this profession."
