

IS IT SENSORY, IS IT BEHAVIOR, OR BOTH?

Understanding Sensory Processory Needs in the Classroom

Educators often wonder whether a student's actions are driven by behavior, sensory needs, or a combination of both.

This engaging training helps participants better understand sensory processing and its impact on student behavior, social-emotional development, and learning.

Participants will explore practical sensory support tools and strategies that can be used immediately to create more inclusive, supportive classroom environments.

By deepening awareness of sensory needs, educators will be better equipped to respond to students with empathy, enhance engagement, and support both emotional well-being and academic success.
